Reflection:

Was it hard, easy?

This was another fun activity that wasn't actually hard to pick up, as I already encountered JavaScript and just had to incorporate the new syntax of Ajax in fetching the definition data that I needed.

What was the most challenging part of the activity?

The most challenging part learning how Ajax worked at first and also encountering a few errors along the way in trying to retrieve the correct definitions, but once I was able to figure it out, it all came together.

What are the key concepts/skills that you learned from this activity?

I learned how Ajax can be used to interact directly with a webpage without it having to be reloaded over and over again by only extracting the information needed. Understanding these concepts make me appreciate how they are incorporated into webpages that I use everyday.
